THE KEYS TO CLEAR COAT DURABILITY

Two key elements contribute to a clearcoat's durability: UV absorbers and film build. UV additives absorb damaging ultraviolet rays; however, they cannot do the job alone in ensuring durability.

Film Build is Critical. Film build ensures long-term durability of the finish. Too low of a film build can lead to premature film failure, dieback, and overall poor appearance. Too high of a film build can lead to solvent pop, dieback, and even potential adhesion failure.

Knowing the film build is especially critical if the job will later be buffed. In other words, one cannot apply a film build of 2 mils, then buff off a half mil. The result will leave not enough UV absorbers or resin solids to block out the ultraviolet rays, thereby compromising durability.
